This modern railroad bridge crossing the Big Black River is located at the site of the battle of Big Black River Bridge (May 17, 1863), part of the Vicksburg Campaign and Siege. The Civil War-era bridge which spanned the river (footings are still visible) was burned by the Confederates to prevent pursuit by Grant's victorious army.